Interstate Commission for Juveniles releases RFP to develop JUSTICE: the JUvenile System for Tracking Interstate Compact Events

Lexington, KY – November 12, 2018 – The Interstate Commission for Juveniles (ICJ) - an organization responsible for the transfer of supervision for juvenile offenders between states - today released a Request for Proposal (RFP) to develop a new information sharing system, named JUSTICE.

The ICJ manages the Interstate Compact for Juveniles, an agreement between states that provides continuous supervision of adjudicated juveniles and facilitates the return of runaways, escapees, or absconders to their home state. The Compact states also assist other states with supervising traveling juveniles.

The purposes of the RFP to select a vendor to provide the hardware, application software, database system, and related support services necessary to implement a new information sharing system to facilitate the ICJ's business processes. ICJ wishes to upgrade from the current forms management application to a customized web-based solution to support the day-to-day activities associated with supervising, transferring, accepting, tracking, and returning juveniles from one state to another.

The RFP seeks to form a partnership with an established vendor to upgrade from the current application to a user-friendly solution for ICJ and the Compact states. Interested vendors should have a history of similar project successes, including a successful solution of transitioning one case management system to another, and the ability to provide the services to design, develop, implement, and support a solution that meets the needs of the Compact users.

The RFP is available at <http://juvenilecompact.org/rfp> beginning November 12, 2018, with a proposal due date of January 18, 2019.
